

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
OAKLAND DIVISION

WILLARD EUGENE THOMAS,

Petitioner,

vs.

KELLY HARINGTON, Warden,

Respondent.

No. C 10-1011 PJH (PR)

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS AND GRANTING CERTIFICATE OF APPEALABILITY

This is a habeas corpus case filed pro se by a state prisoner pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. The court ordered respondent to show cause why the writ should not be granted. Respondent filed an answer and a memorandum of points and authorities in support of it, and lodged exhibits with the court. For the reasons set out below, the petition is denied.

BACKGROUND

On December 16, 2004, a jury found petitioner guilty of one count of forcible rape, see Cal. Penal Code § 261(a)(2), one count of forcible oral copulation, see Cal. Penal Code § 288a(c)(2), two counts of attempted forcible rape, see Cal. Penal Code §§ 261(a)(2), 664, and one count of second-degree robbery, see Cal. Penal Code §§ 211, 212.5(c). Respondent's Exhibit ("Resp. Exh.") A3 at 1055-57. As to the first four counts, the jury found true the allegation that petitioner was armed with a deadly weapon (knife), see Cal. Penal Code § 12022.3(b). Id. at 1056-57. After petitioner waived his right to a jury trial on the prior conviction and strike allegations, the trial court found true that petitioner had suffered one strike prior conviction, see Cal. Penal Code §§ 667.61(c), three prior strike convictions, see Cal. Penal Code §§ 667(a)(1), 1170.12, two prior serious felony 1 convictions, see Cal. Penal Code § 667(a)(1), and two prior prison convictions, see Cal.

2 Penal Code § 667.5(b). Resp. Exh. B6 at 1230-32. On May 13, 2008, the court sentenced 3 petitioner to an indeterminate term of 124 years to life in prison. Resp. Exh. A3 at 1165.
4 On October 17, 2008, the California Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment. Resp. Exh. E.
5 A petition for review was summarily denied by the California Supreme Court on January 21, 6 2009. Resp. Exh. G. Petitioner did not seek further review in the state courts.

7 The facts, as described by the California Court of Appeal, are as follows:

8 About 5:30 a.m. on September 17, 1999, a 58-year-old woman identified 9 at trial as Jane Doe (the victim) left her home on Creely Avenue in 10 Richmond alone and started walking to a bus stop to go to work. When 11 she was close to 55th Street, defendant “popped up.” He was wearing a 12 mask on his face, and he was carrying an object in his hand that the victim 13 believed to be a knife. The victim testified that the object “wasn’t shin[y] or 14 anything like that,” and it “was wrapped in plastic or black tape or, you 15 know, that electrical tape.” She later described the item to police as a 16 sharp object, possibly wrapped with some tape. Defendant pushed the 17 object against the victim’s lower-right hip area, told her that he did not 18 want to hurt her, and also told her that he wanted to walk with her.
19 Although the victim was not able to specify whether the object defendant 20 held was a knife, she said it “felt kind of sharp” when he pressed it against 21 her body, and she believed it was a knife. She also believed that 22 defendant would stab her if she did not cooperate.

23 Defendant walked the victim past where she lived and onto a pathway 24 behind an elementary school called “Cypress Path” and pushed her into 25 the bushes. He kept telling the victim that he did not want to hurt her, and 26 that he did not want her to run. Defendant told the victim to remove one 27 pant leg, and she complied. Defendant unfastened the victim’s bra, put 28 his hand on her breast, and got on top of her. He tried two or three times to penetrate the victim’s vagina with his penis but was unsuccessful.
Defendant then told the victim to touch his penis, and he eventually made her put it in her mouth. He also had sexual intercourse with the victim.
The victim told defendant during the attack to take her purse and leave her alone, but he kept saying that he did not want to hurt her.

After defendant ejaculated inside the victim, he got up, grabbed the victim’s purse, told her he needed money, and left with the purse. The victim ran to her friend’s house nearby and called police. The officer who responded testified that the victim was “very agitated,” and she was slouched on a couch rocking back and forth, crying. Police took the victim to the hospital for an examination. She was bleeding in her vaginal area, the area burned when she urinated, her knee was hurt from when defendant pushed her down, and she was described by the nurse who examined her as “quite a nervous wreck.”

Defendant testified at trial. He claimed that he met the victim for the first time on the evening of September 16, 1999, in a park near Creely Avenue while smoking crack cocaine, and he and the victim smoked crack

1 together both at the park and at the nearby home of defendant's sister.
 2 Defendant testified that he and the victim went to a room in his sister's 3 apartment, where they orally copulated each other and had sexual 4 intercourse. They left the home of defendant's sister early the next 5 morning and returned to the park, where they had sex on a picnic table 6 and then in the bushes, according to defendant. He also testified that the 7 victim gave him $100 to buy cocaine, and that he left with the money but 8 did not return. He denied that he had any weapon when he was with the 9 victim or that he poked her in the side with a sharp object. Defendant's 10 sister testified that defendant and a woman (who had the same first name 11 as the victim) came to her apartment, smoked crack with her and her 12 husband, and then went to a bedroom together. The victim testified that 13 she did not consent to have sex with defendant, and that she had never 14 used illegal drugs.

15 DNA testing was conducted on intact sperm found on a vaginal swab 16 taken from the victim, and the analysis was sent to a Department of 17 Justice laboratory in February 2000. At first no matches were found, but a 18 subsequent search in the Department of Justice's database in 2001 led 19 investigators to defendant.

20 Resp. Exh. E at 2-3 (footnotes omitted).

21 STANDARD OF REVIEW

22 A district court may not grant a petition challenging a state conviction or sentence on 23 the basis of a claim that was reviewed on the merits in state court unless the state court's 24 adjudication of the claim: "(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 25 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the 26 Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an 27 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court 28 proceeding." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The first prong applies both to questions of law and to mixed questions of law and fact, see Williams (Terry) v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 407-09 (2000), while the second prong applies to decisions based on factual determinations, See Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 340 (2003).

A state court decision is "contrary to" Supreme Court authority, that is, falls under the first clause of § 2254(d)(1), only if "the state court arrives at a conclusion opposite to that reached by [the Supreme] Court on a question of law or if the state court decides a case differently than [the Supreme] Court has on a set of materially indistinguishable facts." Williams (Terry), 529 U.S. at 412-13. A state court decision is an "unreasonable application

1 of” Supreme Court authority, falling under the second clause of § 2254(d)(1), if it correctly 2 identifies the governing legal principle from the Supreme Court’s decisions but 3 “unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the prisoner’s case.” Id. at 413. The 4 federal court on habeas review may not issue the writ “simply because that court concludes 5 in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court decision applied clearly 6 established federal law erroneously or incorrectly.” Id. at 411. Rather, the application must 7 be “objectively unreasonable” to support granting the writ. Id. at 409.

8 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2), a state court decision “based on a factual 9 determination will not be overturned on factual grounds unless objectively unreasonable in 10 light of the evidence presented in the state-court proceeding.” See Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 11 340; see also Torres v. Prunty, 223 F.3d 1103, 1107 (9th Cir. 2000).

12 When there is no reasoned opinion from the highest state court to consider the 13 petitioner’s claims, the court looks to the last reasoned opinion. See Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 14 501 U.S. 797, 801-06 (1991); Shackleford v. Hubbard, 234 F.3d 1072, 1079, n. 2 (9th Cir.
15 2000). However, when presented with a state court decision that is unaccompanied by a 16 rationale for its conclusions, a federal court must conduct an independent review of the 17 record to determine whether the state-court decision is objectively unreasonable. See 18 Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2000). This review is not a “de novo review 19 of the constitutional issue;” rather, it is the only way a federal court can determine whether 20 a state-court decision is objectively unreasonable where the state court is silent. See 21 Himes v. Thompson, 336 F.3d 848, 853 (9th Cir. 2003). “[W]here a state court’s decision is 22 unaccompanied by an explanation, the habeas petitioner’s burden still must be met by 23 showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.” See Harrington v.
24 Richter, 131 S. Ct. 770, 784 (2011).

25 DISCUSSION

26 As grounds for federal habeas relief, petitioner asserts that: (1) admission of the 27 bare fact of his 1985 forcible rape conviction violated his due process rights; (2) the trial 28 court unconstitutionally reduced the prosecution’s burden of proof by instructing the jury with CALJIC 2.50.1, regarding use of prior offenses as evidence of guilt; (3) admission of prior sex offense evidence to prove propensity violated his right to due process; (4) his counsel was ineffective for failing to request a pinpoint instruction on after-acquired intent; (5) there was insufficient evidence to support the enhancement for use of a deadly weapon; (6) his due process rights were violated by the court's inadequate responses to jury questions; and (7) counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the consecutive sentence. Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus ("Hab. Pet.") at 6-7.

I. Admission of 1985 Rape Conviction

Petitioner claims that the trial court's admission of the "bare fact" of his 1985 forcible rape conviction violated his due process rights. Hab. Pet. at 6.

A. Factual Background

i. Trial Court

The prosecution filed a pretrial motion in limine pursuant to Cal. Evid. Code §§ 1101(b) and 1108, seeking to introduce evidence of three prior sexual offenses committed by the defendant: A 1981 juvenile charge of assault with intent to commit rape, a 1985 forcible rape conviction, and an alleged sexual assault in 1995. Resp. Exh. E at 4-5. Only the 1985 offense is relevant to this claim. Id. The trial court, after noting the similarity between the charged offense and the prior conviction, allowed the admission of the 1985 conviction over the defendant's objection. Id. at 6. At trial, subject to the defense's evidentiary objection, the parties stipulated that defendant was convicted on June 11, 1985 of the forcible rape of a woman who died in 1990. Id. at 7. The death certificate, which revealed that the victim was 72 at the time she was raped, was admitted into evidence.¹ Id. Defense counsel made a record clarifying that the stipulation was entered into because other documents offered by the prosecution to prove up the prior conviction contained extraneous information that was otherwise inadmissible, irrelevant, and prejudicial. Id. at 7-8.

¹The parties also stipulated that the victim's death was unrelated to the rape. Resp. Exh. E at 7.

1 ii. California Court of Appeal Opinion

2 On direct appeal, petitioner argued that admission of the “bare fact” of his 1985 3 forcible rape conviction, without additional information to assist the jury in determining 4 whether he had a propensity to commit sexual offenses, deprived him of his due process 5 rights. Resp. Exh. E at 12. Petitioner claimed that it was error for the court to admit the 6 conviction pursuant to section 1108 without live testimony from the victim that would 7 provide the jury with information from which it could determine whether to draw an 8 inference of his propensity to commit sexual offenses. Id. As an initial matter, the 9 appellate court noted that the defendant waived the issue because he did not raise this 10 specific objection in the trial court, choosing instead to argue that the probative value of the 11 conviction was substantially outweighed by its prejudicial effect. Id. at 12-13. The court 12 also noted that defense counsel prevented the prosecution from introducing details of the 13 offense from the only available source (the defendant himself) by objecting to the 14 prosecutor’s attempt to cross-examine him concerning the underlying facts of the offense.
15 Id. at 13.

16 Even if the issue was properly preserved for appeal, the court determined there was 17 no reversible error because section 1108 permits the introduction of court documents to 18 prove up a defendant’s prior conviction without the necessity of live testimony. Id. at 13; 19 see People v. Wesson, 138 Cal. App. 4th 959, 967 (2006). The court concluded that, even 20 without live testimony from the victim, there was sufficient information from which the jury 21 could evaluate the weight to give to the evidence and determine whether to draw an 22 inference of defendant’s propensity to commit sexual offenses. Id. at 16. Finally, the court 23 found that even if it was error to admit the conviction without more underlying details, the 24 error was harmless because it was not reasonably probable that defendant would have 25 received a more favorable result if his prior conviction was not admitted. Id. at 17-18.

27
28 B. Discussion

i. Procedural Default

Petitioner contends that admission of his 1985 forcible rape conviction, without additional evidence regarding the details of that rape, violated his right to due process. Hab. Pet. at 6. Petitioner failed to raise this specific objection in the trial court, therefore he procedurally defaulted on the federal constitutional claim he raises in this habeas proceeding. See Vansickel v. White, 166 F.3d 953, 957 (9th Cir. 1999) (“Federal habeas review of a claim is barred in all cases where a state prisoner has defaulted his federal claim in state court pursuant to an adequate and independent state procedural rule.”).

The adequate and independent state ground doctrine provides that federal courts “will not consider an issue of federal law on direct review from a judgment of a state court if that judgment rests on a state-law ground that is both independent of the merits of the federal claim and has an adequate basis for the court’s decision.” See Franklin v. Johnson, 290 F.3d 1223, 1230 (9th Circuit 2002) (citation omitted). California’s “contemporaneous objection rule,” which requires objection at the time of trial to preserve an issue for appeal, is an adequate procedural bar. See Chein v. Shumsky, 323 F.3d 748, 751–52 (9th Cir. 2003), rev’d on other grounds, 373 F.3d 978 (9th Cir. 2004). Petitioner also fails to demonstrate “cause for the default and actual prejudice as a result of the alleged violation of federal law, or demonstrate that failure to consider the claims will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice.” See Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 750 (1991). In fact, petitioner’s entire argument is rather disingenuous as defense counsel made the strategic choice to object to the prosecutor’s attempt to elicit details of the offense during her cross-examination of the defendant. Resp. Exh. E at 13. Accordingly, petitioner is procedurally barred from raising this claim on federal habeas review.

ii. Merits

Even if petitioner had raised a cognizable claim, it fails on its merits. Petitioner is challenging the admission of a prior forcible rape conviction under California Evidence Code § 1108. “A state court’s evidentiary ruling is grounds for federal habeas corpus relief only if it renders the state proceeding so fundamentally unfair as to violate due process.”

See Bueno v. Hallahan, 988 F.2d 86, 87 (9th Cir.1993) citing Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d 918, 919–20 (9th Cir.1991). The Ninth Circuit has made it clear that the admission of prior evidence of sexual misconduct to show a defendant's propensity to commit the charged offense does not violate due process. See Mejia v. Garcia, 534 F.3d 1036, 1046–47 (9th Cir. 2008). Moreover, there is no Supreme Court authority which has clearly established that propensity evidence admitted pursuant to a state evidentiary rule must be accompanied by details of the offense. See e.g. Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d 1091, 1101 (9th Cir. 2009). In any event, the court finds it difficult to imagine a scenario where the admission of additional detail concerning the rape of a 72 year old woman could have helped his defense in any way. Accordingly, there is no justification for granting the writ.

II. CALJIC 2.50.1

Petitioner contends that the trial court's modified instruction regarding evidence of other sexual offenses, given without objection, improperly diluted the prosecution's burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Hab. Pet. at 6.

A. Factual Background

The trial court instructed the jury as follows:

CALJIC 2.50.1

Evidence has been introduced for the purpose of showing that the defendant engaged in a sexual offense other than that charged in the case.

If you find that the defendant committed a prior sexual offense, you may, but are not required to, infer that the defendant had a disposition to commit sexual offenses.

If you find that the defendant had this disposition, you may, but are not required to, infer that he was likely to commit and did commit the crime for which he is accused.

However, if you find by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant committed a prior sexual offense, that is not sufficient by itself to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that he committed the charged crimes.

If you determine an inference properly ... can be drawn from this evidence, this inference is simply one item for you to consider, along with all the other evidence, in determining whether the defendant has been proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of the charged crimes.

1 Unless you are otherwise instructed, you must not consider this evidence 2 for any other purpose.

3 Resp. Exh. B6 at 1144-45.

4 On direct appeal, petitioner acknowledged that the same instruction had been 5 approved by the California Supreme Court in People v. Reliford, 29 Cal. 4th 1007, 1016 6 (2003), but raised the issue to preserve it for later review. Resp. Exh. C at 23. The Court 7 of Appeal concluded that it was bound by the Supreme Court's holding in Reliford, and 8 rejected petitioner's claim that the instruction violated due process because it permitted the 9 jury to find a defendant guilty of the charged offense based on a preponderance of the 10 evidence. Resp. Exh. E at 19.

11 B. Legal Standard

12 The formulation of jury instructions is a question of state law and is not cognizable in 13 habeas proceedings. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991). A faulty jury 14 instruction will constitute a violation of due process only where the instruction by itself 15 infects the entire trial to such an extent that the resulting conviction violates due process.
16 See Hendricks v. Vasquez, 974 F.2d 1099, 1106 (9th Cir.1992) citing Cupp v. Naughten, 17 414 U.S. 141, 147 (1973). Whether a constitutional violation has occurred will depend 18 upon the evidence in the case and the overall instructions given to the jury. See Duckett v.
19 Godinez, 67 F.3d 734, 745 (9th Cir.1995). Where a given jury instruction is ambiguous, a 20 reviewing court must determine whether there is a "reasonable likelihood" that the jury was 21 misled. See Murtishaw v. Woodford, 255 F.3d 926, 967 (9th Cir. 2001).

22 C. Discussion

23 The record reflects that there was nothing in the plain language of the instructions, 24 or in the arguments of the parties, to suggest that the jury applied CALJIC 2.50.1 in such a 25 way as to convict petitioner of the instant offense based on his commission of a prior 26 offense. Resp. Exh. B6 at 1093-95, 1113-14, 1144-45. During his closing argument, 27 defense counsel emphasized that the defendant's prior rape conviction did not diminish the 28 prosecution's burden to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt for the instant offense.

1 Resp. Exh. B6 at 1093-95. The prosecutor's only reference to the prior conviction was 2 during rebuttal, and there was nothing in her statement that would indicate there was a 3 "reasonable likelihood" that the jury was misled. Resp. Exh. B6 at 1113-14. Viewed in the 4 context of the jury instructions and the record as a whole, the trial court's giving of CALJIC 5 2.50.1 did not violate due process. See Estelle, 502 U.S. at 72. Accordingly, the state 6 court's decision was not contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established 7 federal law, as determined by the United States Supreme Court. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

8 III. Admission of Prior Sex Offense Evidence to Prove Propensity

9 Petitioner contends that the trial court's admission of prior sex offense evidence 10 pursuant to California Evidence Code § 1108 to show propensity violated his right to due 11 process.

12 This claim lacks merit. The Supreme Court has never held that the admission of 13 prior evidence of sexual misconduct to show propensity to commit a charged crime is 14 unconstitutional. See Estelle, 502 U.S. at 75 n. 5; see also Mejia v. Garcia, 534 F.3d 1036, 15 1046 (9th Cir. 2008). Moreover, there has been no clear ruling that the "admission of 16 irrelevant or overtly prejudicial evidence constitutes a due process violation sufficient to 17 warrant issuance of the writ." See Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d 1091, 1101 (9th Cir.
 18 2009)." Therefore, the state court's decision was not contrary to or an unreasonable 19 application of clearly established federal law. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1).

20 IV. Ineffective Assistance of Trial Counsel Re: Pinpoint Instruction

21 Petitioner contends that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request a 22 pinpoint jury instruction on after-acquired intent with respect to the robbery charge. Hab.
 23 Pet. at 6.

24 A. Legal Principles

25 i. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

26 In order to succeed on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, the petitioner must 27 satisfy the two-pronged test set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687
 28 (1984), which requires him to show deficient performance and prejudice. Deficient

1 performance requires a showing that trial counsel's representation fell below an objective
2 standard of reasonableness as measured by prevailing professional norms. See Wiggins
3 v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 521 (2003). To establish prejudice, petitioner must show a 4 reasonable probability that "but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 5 proceeding would have been different." See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. If a petitioner 6 cannot establish that defense counsel's performance was deficient, it is unnecessary for a 7 federal court considering a habeas ineffective assistance claim to address the prejudice 8 prong of the Strickland test. See Siripongs v. Calderon, 133 F.3d 732, 737 (9th Cir. 1998).

9 ii. After-acquired Intent

10 In California, "theft is a lesser included offense of robbery, which includes the 11 additional element of force or fear." See People v. Castaneda, 51 Cal. 4th 1292, 1331 12 (2011). In order to commit the crime of robbery, the intent to steal must be formed before 13 or during the application of force. Id. After-acquired intent refers to a situation where the 14 intent to steal arises after the defendant's use of force, resulting in a theft and not a 15 robbery. See People v. Ramkeesoon, 39 Cal. 3d 346, 351 (1985). "Instructions on 16 after-acquired intent and theft as a lesser included offense of robbery are unwarranted 17 absent 'substantial evidence' that the defendant first formed the intent to take the victim's 18 property after applying force." See Castaneda, 51 Cal. 4th at 1331.

19 B. Factual Background

20 On direct appeal, petitioner argued that, based on the victim's testimony, there was 21 "ample basis" for jurors to conclude that the intent to steal the victim's purse arose after he 22 had completed the sexual assault. Resp. Exh. E at 20. Therefore, trial counsel's 23 performance was deficient for not requesting a pinpoint jury instruction such as CALCRIM 24 No. 1600, which specifically informs the jury that "[t]he defendant's intent to take the 25 property must have been formed before or during the time (he/she) used force or fear. If 26 the defendant did not form this required intent until after using the force or fear, then 27 (he/she) did not commit robbery." Id.

28 The Court of Appeal rejected this argument, finding that the trial court's standard

1 instruction on robbery, together with an instruction on the lesser included offense of grand 2 theft, made it clear to the jury that, in order to find defendant guilty of robbery, they had to 3 be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant used force against the victim with 4 the specific intent to deprive her of property. Id. at 20-21. Trial counsel urged jurors to 5 convict defendant of the lesser included offense based on his testimony indicating that he 6 took the victim's money, but not by force or fear. Id. at 21. Counsel's performance was not 7 deficient, as the jury was properly instructed that there must be a "union or joint operation 8 of act or conduct and a certain specific intent in the mind of" defendant in order to convict 9 him. Id.

10 Even assuming that counsel's performance was deficient for failing to request a 11 pinpoint instruction on after-acquired intent, the Court of Appeal found that there was no 12 prejudice because it was not reasonably likely that the result of the proceeding would have 13 been different. Id. at 21-22; see Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694.

14 C. Discussion

15 Petitioner claims that counsel's performance was deficient for not requesting a 16 pinpoint instruction on after-acquired intent, because there was enough evidence to support 17 his theory that the intent to steal the victim's purse arose only after the sexual assault was 18 completed. Hab. Pet. at 6.

19 The jury was instructed, pursuant to CALJIC 3.31, that in order to find defendant 20 guilty of robbery, "there must exist a union or joint operation of act or conduct or certain 21 specific intent in the mind of the perpetrator." Resp. Exh. B6 at 1154-55. The jury was also 22 instructed, pursuant to CALJIC 9.40, that robbery involves the taking of "personal property 23 in the possession of another... accomplished by means of force or fear, and with the 24 specific intent to permanently deprive that person of the property." Id. at 1157-58. Finally, 25 the jury was instructed, pursuant to CALJIC 14.02, on the lesser included offense of grand 26 theft, which did not contain the element of force or fear. Id. at 1162-63. Although the jury 27 was not so instructed, robbery requires proof of an intent to steal before or during the 28 application of force, and not merely after the application of force. See People v. Yeoman, 31 Cal. 4th 93, 128-29 (2003). Upon request, a defendant is entitled to instructions that “pinpoint” his theory of the defense. See People v. Webster, 54 Cal. 3d 411, 443 (1991).

Petitioner claims that the jury should have been instructed on whether his intent to steal was formed during the assault or immediately after. In support, petitioner cites to the victim’s testimony that, prior to the rape, she repeatedly told him to take her purse and leave her alone, and he responded that he didn’t want her purse. Resp. Exh. B4 at 14, 49-50. After he finished the assault he grabbed the victim’s purse, telling her he needed money, and then left. Id. at 14. Assuming for the sake of argument that the preceding testimony was sufficient to require an instruction on after-acquired intent, counsel’s failure to request the instruction is insufficient to establish prejudice. The trial court’s instructions made it clear that robbery required concurrence between the act and the specific intent formed; as well as a taking by force or fear, an element that was not required for grand theft. By finding petitioner guilty of robbery rather than theft, the jury necessarily found concurrence between the petitioner’s use of force or fear and the intent to steal, and rejected petitioner’s theory that the intent to steal was formed after the act.

Based on the record as a whole, as well as the court’s instructions, it is not reasonably likely that the result of the proceeding would have been different had counsel requested an instruction on after-acquired intent. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. Accordingly, the state court’s determination that petitioner was not denied the effective assistance of counsel was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687.

V. Sufficiency of the Evidence

Petitioner contends that there was insufficient evidence to support the jury’s finding on the weapons enhancement for counts one through four.

A. Legal Standard

In Jackson v. Virginia, the Supreme Court established the due process standard by which federal courts review a habeas corpus petition challenging the sufficiency of 1 evidence for a state conviction. 443 U.S. 307, 316 (1979). Due process requires that “no 2 person shall be made to suffer the onus of a criminal conviction except upon sufficient 3 proof—defined as evidence necessary to convince a trier of fact beyond a reasonable doubt 4 of the existence of every element of the offense.” Id. at 316. A state prisoner who alleges 5 that the evidence in support of his state conviction cannot be fairly characterized as 6 sufficient to have led a rational trier of fact to find guilt beyond a reasonable doubt states a 7 federal constitutional claim that, if proven, entitles him to federal habeas relief. Id. at 321, 8 324.

9 A federal court reviewing a state court conviction does not determine whether it is 10 satisfied that the evidence established guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. See Payne v.
11 Borg, 982 F.2d 335, 338 (9th Cir. 1993). The federal court “determines only whether, ‘after 12 viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, any rational trier of fact 13 could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt.’” Id.
14 quoting Jackson, 443 U.S. at 319. A court must apply the Jackson standard “with explicit 15 reference to the substantive elements of the criminal offense as defined by state law.” See 16 Chein v. Shumsky, 373 F.3d 978, 983 (9th Cir. 2004).

17 Under the Jackson standard, a conviction may be supported by logical inferences 18 from circumstantial evidence, but the inferences cannot be merely speculative. See 19 Sarausad v. Porter, 479 F.3d 671, 677 (9th Cir. 2007), rev’d on other grounds sub nom.
20 Waddington v. Sarausad, 555 U.S. 179, 182 (2009); Walters v. Maass, 45 F.3d 1355, 1358 21 (9th Cir. 1995). Where behavior is consistent with both guilt and innocence, the burden is 22 on the state to produce evidence that would allow a rational trier of fact to conclude beyond 23 a reasonable doubt that the behavior was consistent with guilt; however, the “prosecution 24 need not affirmatively rule out every hypothesis except that of guilt.” See Sarausad, 479 25 F.3d at 678 (citation omitted).

26 After AEDPA, a federal habeas court applies the standards of Jackson with an 27 additional layer of deference. See Juan H. v. Allen, 408 F.3d 1262, 1274 (9th Cir. 2005).
28 The Ninth Circuit has held that section 2254(d)(1) of AEDPA applies to federal review of a

1 state court's sufficiency of the evidence determination under Jackson. Id. at 1274-75. If 2 the state court affirms a conviction under Jackson, the federal court must decide whether 3 the state court's application of Jackson was objectively unreasonable. See Sarausad, 479 4 F.3d at 677-78. The Ninth Circuit has adopted guidelines for determining whether a state 5 court applied Jackson in an objectively unreasonable manner under section 2254(d)(1), 6 which states as follows:

- 7 (1) The focus of the inquiry is on the state court decision;
- 8 (2) Even with the deference due by statute to the state court's 9 determinations, the federal habeas court must look to the "totality of the evidence" in evaluating the state court's decision;
- 10 (3) The failure of the state court to consider at all a key argument of the 11 defendant may indicate that its conclusion is objectively unreasonable; however, the paucity of reasoning employed by the state court does not 12 itself establish that its result is objectively unreasonable;
- 13 (4) The failure of a state court to give appropriate weight to all of the evidence may mean that its conclusion is objectively unreasonable; and
- 14 (5) The absence of cases of conviction precisely parallel on their facts does not, by itself, establish objective unreasonableness.

15 Sarausad, 479 F. 3d at 678 (citation omitted).

16 In contrast, section 2254(d)(2) does not apply to Jackson cases because the federal 17 court does not decide whether the state court unreasonably determined disputed facts.
 18 Sarausad, 479 F.3d at 678. Rather, the court must decide whether the state court 19 unreasonably applied the Jackson test. Id. at 683. Accordingly, a federal court evaluates a 20 challenge to a state conviction on insufficient evidence grounds under section 2254(d)(1) 21 rather than (d)(2). Id. at 678.

22 B. Discussion

23 i. California law

24 Under California law a person is armed with a deadly weapon when he carries such 25 weapon or has it available for use in either offense or defense. See People v. Reaves, 42 26 Cal. App. 3d 852, 856-57 (1974). "[A] 'deadly weapon' is 'any object, instrument, or 27 weapon which is used in such a manner as to be capable of producing and likely to 28

1 produce, death or great bodily injury.” See People v. Aguilar, 16 Cal. 4th 1023, 1028-29 2 (1997). (internal quotations omitted, citations omitted). There are two classes of 3 dangerous or deadly weapons: instrumentalities that are weapons in the strict sense, such 4 as guns and blackjacks; and instrumentalities which may be used as weapons but which 5 have non-dangerous uses, such as hammers and pocket knives. See People v. Burton, 6 143 Cal. App. 4th 447, 457 (2006). (citations omitted). Instrumentalities in the first 7 category are dangerous or deadly per se. Id. at 457. (internal quotations omitted). An 8 instrumentality in the second category is only dangerous or deadly when it is capable of 9 being used in a dangerous or deadly manner and the evidence shows its possessor 10 intended to use it as such. Id. (internal quotations omitted). In determining whether an 11 object not inherently deadly or dangerous is used as such, the trier of fact may consider the 12 nature of the object, the manner in which it is used, and all other facts relevant to the issue.
 13 Aguilar, 16 Cal. 4th at 1029.

14 ii. California Court of Appeal Opinion

15 The Court of Appeal described the facts underlying petitioner’s sufficiency of the 16 evidence claim as follows:

17 The victim testified that when defendant approached her, he “had 18 something in his hand, and I thought it was a knife, and it was wrapped in 19 something. It wasn’t shin[y] or anything like that. “The object” was 20 wrapped in plastic or black tape or, you know, that electrical tape.” She 21 acknowledged that “I did not see it,” but that she “saw the blackness” of 22 the tape around the object. The victim also testified that defendant 23 pushed the object into her side, and that “[i]t felt kind of sharp. It just felt 24 like a knife or something. It felt sharp.” A police officer testified that the 25 victim “described [the object] as a sharp metal object, possibly wrapped 26 with some tape.... [¶] ... [¶] She wasn’t able to specify whether it was a 27 knife. That’s what she said it was.” The officer also testified that the victim 28 “believed if she didn’t cooperate, she would be stabbed.”

Resp. Exh. E at 23.

24 Petitioner challenged the victim’s testimony regarding the nature of the object 25 pressed against her side, arguing that she never saw the metal object, and that he never 26 told her, or suggested, what the object was, therefore there was no basis for the jury to 27 conclude that the object was a deadly weapon. Resp. Exh. C at 43-46. The Court of 1 Appeal rejected petitioner's argument, concluding that, based on the victim's testimony, her 2 description of what she saw in defendant's hand, along with her other sensory perceptions 3 of the object, were substantial evidence that the item was a knife. Resp. Exh. E at 24.

4 Therefore there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's conclusion that petitioner was 5 armed with a deadly weapon. Id.

6 iii. Analysis

7 With respect to the deadly weapon enhancement, the jury was instructed as follows:

8 CALJIC 17.19.1

9 A deadly weapon is any object, instrument, or weapon which is used in 10 such a manner as to be capable of producing and likely to produce death 11 or great bodily injury, and it can be inferred from the evidence, including 12 the attending circumstances, the time or place, destination of the 13 possessor, the alterations, if any, of the object from its standard form and 14 any other relevant facts that the possessor intended on these occasions 15 to use it as a weapon should the circumstances so require.

16 The term armed with a deadly weapon means only to carry a deadly 17 weapon or have it available for offensive or defensive use.

18 Resp. Exh. B6 at 1164.

19 Based on the evidence presented at trial, a rational trier of fact could have 20 concluded that petitioner was armed with a deadly weapon. The victim testified that 21 petitioner confronted her wearing a mask and had something in his hand that she thought 22 was a knife. Resp. Exh. B4 at 9. Petitioner pushed the object against her side and made 23 her walk with him, at the same time stating that he did not want to hurt her. Id. at 9-10.
24 Petitioner argues that this evidence is not enough to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that 25 the object was a deadly weapon. Resp. Exh. C at 45. It can be reasonably inferred from 26 the victim's testimony and the surrounding circumstances that petitioner pressed a knife 27 against the victim's body in order to make her walk with him away from the street and 28 toward the bushes, where he could rape her. It is also reasonable to infer that petitioner, although stating that he did not want to hurt her, would not hesitate to do so if she did not comply with his demands. Based on the evidence presented, a rational juror could infer that petitioner had a knife in his possession and intended to use it if it became necessary.

iv. Conclusion

Viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, the record supports the conclusion that a rational trier of fact could have found beyond a reasonable doubt that petitioner was armed with a deadly weapon. See United States v. Herrera-Gonzalez, 263 F.3d 1092, 1095 (9th Cir. 2001). The state court's determination that there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's verdict of first-degree murder was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1); Jackson at 316.

VI. Trial Court's Response to Jury's Questions

Petitioner contends that the trial court's responses to the jury's questions concerning the application of the weapon enhancement were inadequate, thereby violating his right to due process. Hab. Pet. at 6b. Petitioner failed to raise this specific objection in the trial court, therefore he procedurally defaulted on the federal constitutional claim he raises in this habeas proceeding. See Vansickel v. White, 166 F.3d 953, 957 (9th Cir. 1999) ("Federal habeas review of a claim is barred in all cases where a state prisoner has defaulted his federal claim in state court pursuant to an adequate and independent state procedural rule."). Notwithstanding the fact that petitioner forfeited his challenge by failing to object at trial, the court will address the merits because the state court did not rely on a procedural bar as the basis for its decision. Id.

A. Factual Background

The Court of Appeal described the facts underlying this claim as follows:

On the first day of deliberations, the jury sent the following note to the court: "-Clarification on Penal Code 12022.3(B)--want to know if charge says 'knife, a deadly weapon' can just be assumption of a deadly weapon, not specific to a knife.--Victim's assumption (fear) that it was a knife and/or a deadly weapon is enough to convict." The court first sent the following note to the jury: "Could you please clarify request # 1 re: Penal Code § 12022.3(b)." Written on that note is the message (presumably from the jury), "We would like clarification." The jury also wrote a separate note: "Penal Code Section 12022.3(b). (need tomorrow morning)." The trial court then responded: "1. The instruction is specific as to a knife. [¶] 2. With respect to your second question, please refer to jury instruction 17.19.1."

Resp. Exh. E at 25.

The Court of Appeal found that the trial court's response, in conjunction with jury

1 instructions that correctly summarized the relevant law, was sufficient to communicate to 2 jurors that they had to find that the defendant possessed a knife, and could not base a 3 conviction on the victim's assumption alone. Id. at 26.

4 B. Legal Standard

5 The Supreme Court has clearly stated that it is reversible error for a trial judge to 6 give an answer to a jury's question that is misleading, unresponsive, or legally incorrect.
7 See United States v. Frega, 179 F.3d 793, 810 (1999) citing Bollenbach v. United States, 8 326 U.S. 607, 612-13 (1946) ("When a jury makes explicit its difficulties a trial judge should 9 clear them away with concrete accuracy.").

10 The trial judge has a duty to respond to the jury's request for guidance with sufficient 11 specificity to clarify the jury's problem, because, in a trial by jury, the judge is not a mere 12 moderator, but is the governor of the trial for the purpose of assuring its proper conduct and 13 of determining questions of law; moreover, when constitutional requirements are involved, 14 the proper execution of this duty is a matter of insuring due process of law as guaranteed 15 by Fourteenth Amendment. See McDowell v. Calderon, 130 F.3d 833, 840 (9th Cir. 1997) 16 (en banc) overruled in part on other grounds by Weeks v. Angelone, 528 U.S. 225 (2000).

17 C. Discussion

18 Here, the jury appears to have made two requests. The plain language of the first 19 note indicates that the jury was unclear as to whether it could find the allegation true based 20 simply upon the victim's assumption that petitioner had a knife or a deadly weapon, or 21 whether they were required to find specifically that petitioner had a knife. Resp. Exh. A3 at 22 1062. In the second note the jury asked for clarification with respect to Cal. Penal Code 23 § 12022.3. Id. at 1065. The court's written response told the jury, in no uncertain terms, 24 that the instruction specifically referred to a knife, and that for clarification of the statute 25 they were to refer back to the jury instruction, which was a correct statement of the law. Id.
26 at 1067 (emphasis added). As the Court of Appeal noted, the trial court answered the 27 question in a way that was beneficial to petitioner by requiring the jury to find affirmatively 28 that he had a knife, and not that the victim just assumed he had a knife. The trial court thus

1 complied with its obligation to respond to the jury's request with specificity. Properly 2 informed, the jury applied the law as instructed and determined that petitioner was armed 3 with a knife, a deadly weapon, in counts one through four. Based on the instructions as a 4 whole and the entire trial record, there is no reasonable likelihood that the jury applied the 5 law incorrectly due to the court's response. See e.g. Estelle, 502 U.S. at 72. The state 6 court's decision finding that the trial court's response to the jury was adequate was not 7 contrary to, or an unreasonable application of clearly established Supreme Court law.

8 VII. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel for Failing to Object to Sentence

9 Petitioner contends that counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's 10 imposition of consecutive sentences. Hab. Pet. at 6b.

11 A. The Sentence

12 The trial court sentenced petitioner to a total term of 124 years to life in prison, 13 consisting of 25 years to life on counts one and two, pursuant to the one strike law, see 14 Cal. Pen. Code § 667.61, to be served concurrently and tripled pursuant to the three strikes 15 law, for a total of 75 years to life; five years for each of the prior felony convictions, to bring 16 the total to 85 years to life; the midterm of two years for the weapon enhancement, to bring 17 the total to 87 years to life; two years for the two prison priors, to bring the total to 89 years 18 to life; and the midterm of three years on counts three and four, to run concurrent to each 19 other and to counts one and two. Resp. Exh. B7 at 1299, E at 27. As to count five 20 (robbery), the court sentenced defendant to 25 years to life (pursuant to the three strikes 21 law), to be served consecutively, plus two five-year sentences for the serious prior felonies 22 (which is required to run consecutively), bringing the total to 124 years to life. Id. at 1300.

23 The court relied on three primary reasons for ordering the robbery sentence to run 24 consecutively: first, the objective in the robbery was different from the sexual assaults; 25 second, defendant's prior crimes, both adult and juvenile, were numerous and increasing in 26 seriousness; and third, defendant had been unsuccessful while on parole. Resp. Exh. B7 27 at 1287-89. Defense counsel pointed out that a consecutive sentence on the robbery 28 charge was not required by law, and argued that the robbery was merely an "afterthought."

1 Id. at 1290-91. Counsel further asked the court to consider whether a consecutive 2 sentence was warranted in light of the value of the items that were taken. Id. at 1291. The 3 court rejected counsel's argument for a concurrent sentence, making it clear that the 4 community had to be protected from petitioner, and that the consecutive sentence was 5 intended to punish him as much as possible. Id.

6 B. California Court of Appeal Opinion

7 On direct appeal, petitioner argued that the trial court's sentence violated the "dual-8 use rule" by relying on the same prior convictions as a basis both to enhance petitioner's 9 sentence and to impose consecutive terms. Resp. Exh. E at 28. Therefore counsel was 10 ineffective because, had he objected to the dual-use error, the trial court may have 11 imposed a concurrent term for the robbery conviction. The state court rejected the claim, 12 concluding that, even if there was error, petitioner failed to establish prejudice. Id. at 29.

13 C. Legal Standard

14 In order to succeed on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, the petitioner must 15 satisfy the two-pronged test set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687
16 (1984), which requires him to show deficient performance and prejudice. Deficient
17 performance requires a showing that trial counsel's representation fell below an objective
18 standard of reasonableness as measured by prevailing professional norms. See Wiggins
19 v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 521 (2003). To establish prejudice, petitioner must show a 20 reasonable probability that "but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 21 proceeding would have been different." See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694.

22 D. Discussion

23 In his habeas petition, petitioner asserts that counsel was ineffective for failing to 24 object to the imposition of a consecutive sentence. Hab. Pet. at 6. Petitioner fails to 25 specify the details of his claim, so the court must assume that it is the same claim as the 26 one he raised on direct appeal.

27 Petitioner states that the trial court relied, in part, on the fact that his prior convictions 28 were of numerous and of increasing seriousness, thereby giving rise to a dual-use violation 1 because the same prior convictions were used to support other sentencing enhancements.

2 Resp. Exh. C at 56-57. In the first instance, it is not established under California law that 3 the use of petitioner's prior convictions in this manner is impermissible. See e.g. People v.
4 Coronado, 12 Cal. 4th 145, 157-58 (1995). Second, petitioner's argument ignores the fact 5 that, even if the trial court's reliance on his prior convictions was improper, the court had 6 other legitimate bases on which it could rely to impose consecutive sentences: namely, the 7 fact that the robbery and the sex crimes had different objectives, as well as the fact that his 8 performance while on parole was poor. As such, counsel's failure to object to the sentence 9 does not amount to deficient performance.

10 Even assuming that counsel's performance was deficient for failing to object to the 11 alleged sentencing error, petitioner's claim fails for lack of prejudice. The court made it 12 clear that its primary reason for imposing a consecutive sentence was to protect the 13 community from petitioner, and to punish him as much as possible within the bounds of the 14 law. Resp. Exh. B7 at 1291-92. Additionally, counsel's comments noting that the 15 imposition of a consecutive sentence was not required by law was in the nature of an 16 objection. In view of this record, there is not a reasonable likelihood that the court would 17 have imposed a concurrent sentence for the robbery conviction had counsel more clearly 18 objected to the imposition of consecutive sentences. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694.

19 Accordingly, the state court's determination that petitioner was not denied the 20 effective assistance of counsel was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, 21 clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States.
22 See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687.

23 VIII. Appealability

24 The federal rules governing habeas cases brought by state prisoners require a 25 district court that denies a habeas petition to grant or deny a certificate of appealability 26 ("COA") in the ruling. See Rule 11(a), Rules Governing § 2254 Cases, 28 U.S.C. foll.
27 § 2254 (effective December 1, 2009).

28 To obtain a COA, petitioner must make "a substantial showing of the denial of a

1 constitutional right.” 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). “Where a district court has rejected the 2 constitutional claims on the merits, the showing required to satisfy § 2253(c) is 3 straightforward: The petitioner must demonstrate that reasonable jurists would find the 4 district court’s assessment of the constitutional claims debatable or wrong.” See Slack v.
 5 McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000). Section 2253(c)(3) requires a court granting a COA
 6 to indicate which issues satisfy the COA standard. Here, the court finds that two issues 7 presented by petitioner in his petition meet the above standard and accordingly GRANTS 8 the COA as to those issues. See generally Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 322.

9 The issues are:

10 (1) whether there was insufficient evidence to support the jury’s finding on the deadly 11 weapon enhancement for counts one through four; and 12 (2) whether the trial court’s responses to the jury’s questions concerning the 13 application of the weapon enhancement were inadequate.

14 Accordingly, the clerk shall forward the file, including a copy of this order, to the 15 Court of Appeals. See Fed. R. App. P. 22(b); United States v. Asrar, 116 F.3d 1268, 1270 16 (9th Cir. 1997).

17 CONCLUSION

18 For the foregoing reasons, the petition for a writ of habeas corpus is DENIED.

19 A Certificate of Appealability also is DENIED. See Rule 11(a) of the Rules Governing 20 Section 2254 Cases.

21 The clerk shall close the file.

22 IT IS SO ORDERED.
